

Dr. Robert Belshe is currently Professor of Medicine and Pediatrics; Director of the Division of Infectious Diseases & Immunology; and Director of the Center for Vaccine Development at Saint Louis University School of Medicine. Under Dr. Belshe's leadership, the School of Medicine has established an AIDS Vaccine Evaluation Unit that represents the primary ongoing national research effort to prevent HIV infection.

Dr. Belshe has published more than 100 articles and books on viruses and vaccines, as well as presented papers on the subject of AIDS and other infectious diseases all over the world.